

Banff Y president takes role with national board

Banff YWCA outgoing president Susan Kennard was appointed to the YWCA Canada's board of directors this month, making her the first Bow Valley resident to join the national organization.

"Susan has been a driving force on the local YWCA board for eight years and her appointment to the national board is a testament to her contribution, as well as her commitment and capacity to strategically address issues facing women and girls at a national and global level," said YWCA CEO Connie MacDonald.

"This is a great achievement for Susan and our organization and we are all immensely proud and grateful for her continued leadership."

Kennard joined Banff YWCA's board in 2008 and has served as president since 2013. She will remain on the local board for another year as past president.

"During my tenure with YWCA Banff, I've had the opportunity to work with our local board of directors and CEO to renew our organization's relevance to, and relationship with, the community. It has been particularly rewarding to see how stakeholders in and beyond the Bow Valley have embraced this process of renewal on many levels," Kennard said.

As a board member of YWCA Canada, Kennard will have the opportunity to contribute further to the national and international movement and share information and best practices directly with the YWCA team in the Bow Valley.

"YWCA Canada has provided strategic advice and opportunities to participate in national and international meetings focused on the advancement of human rights and social justice for women and girls," Kennard said.

"Last fall I had the good fortune to be appointed to the Canadian delegation attending the YWCA World Council Meetings in Thailand and was able to learn more about the impact the YWCA has on the 25 million women who are involved in our organization."

Kennard also represented YWCA Canada as a delegate to the 57th and 59th United Nations Commission on the Status of Women in 2013 and 2015.
